Berne, July 6. N. S. The Commotions in the Cevennes and the Vivarez encreaſe daily, and the Reformed have lately been joined by great Numbers of the Roman Catholick Perſuaſion; ſo that it at preſent appears, that theſe Diſturbances ariſe as well from the general Diſſatisfaction of the People, as from the Perſecution in Point of Religion. Our late Advices concerning an Action between the King's Troops and theſe Malecontents are confirmed. Letters from Lyons of the thirtieth of the laſt Month, tell us, that there were ſixteen hundred Men killed in the Field of Battel, but do not ſay whether the King's Forces or the Malecontents had the Victory: What makes us conclude the latter had the Advantage, is, that the Duke of Berwick, upon Advice of this Engagement, had detached eleven Battalions to join the Duke of Roquelaure, who was likewiſe to be reinforced by twenty ſeven Squadrons from Spain. It is ſaid, that the Duke of Berwick's Army, after this Detachment, conſiſted of ſeventy Battalions and fifty Squadrons. There are Letters which ſay the Malecontents ſince this Action conſiſted of a Body of five thouſand Men; and that ſome Swiſs Regiments not only refuſed to Charge, but fired upon their own Officers, who urged them to obey their Orders. Theſe Advices add, that the French King had commanded all his Troops, except twenty four Battalions, to retire out of Spain; and that thoſe Troops, as they return into his own Dominions, are to be diſperſed to ſeveral Parts of the Kingdom, in which the Court is apprehenſive of Tumults. The Army commanded by the Duke of Berwick is ſtill Intrenched near Briançon. The Diet of the thirteen Cantons is to meet at Baden on the eighth Inſtant, and it is not doubted but the Affair of Tockenbourg will ſoon be wholly adjuſted.

Frankfort, July 11. N. S. Yeſterday Count de Zobor, Adjutant-General to his Imperial Majeſty, ſet out from this Place for the Army in Flanders. Count Rechteren is expected here every moment; and it is ſuppoſed, that as ſoon as he hath held a Conference with the Deputies of the neighbouring Circles, he will return to the Hague. Letters from the Imperial Camp at Etlingen adviſe, that General Thungen was arrived there from the Baths of Embs, and that they were making the neceſſary Diſpoſitions for paſſing the Rhine. Theſe Letters add, that a Party of the Troops of the Elector-Palatine lately engaged a Body of French near Hombourg, and entirely defeated them. Advices from the Enemies Army ſay, that they
